

Slowing Down

Although I will continue to study plants and practice my plant identification skills, I have decided to discontinue this newsletter.

If you have not previously done so, I invite you to sign up for the Tidbits email list. The emails on that list run for about three years after you sign up. They explore all kinds of interesting tidbits about plants.

I have created a number of videos which provide a careful look at a plant through its life cycle. My plan is to continue creating these plant portrait videos whenever my photo gallery and inner motivation prompt me to do so.

Mystery Plant Confirmed

Josh Fecteau was the first to correctly identify Mystery Plant 090 as Asiatic bittersweet (Celastrus orbiculatus). This is a plant which some people love for its colorful winter berries and which most of us dislike for its rapid, take-over growth.
